MANTILLA THE PROPER THING

AMONG the smart set that keeps pace with the times we shall see much of tulle or lace mantillas in shades of ecru or yellow occupying a place among summer garments. The shape will be that of a very small round cape with very long, broad ends in front. As the garment of these with peculiarly be a mass of frillings and ruchings of lace, embroidery and mousseline de sole in the same shades, they will constitute dressy and light little garments very acceptable both for town and during the hot season in fashionable resorts, or at the seaside. When lining is required it will be in white or self-color.

The Fashionable Sash.

Long batiste or linen sashes will form part of most summer toilettes; these also will be white, ecru, or yellow, tied at the back or side in a loose bow with falling loops, some forming but a narrow draped waistband somewhat pointed in front, others arranged in a broad corselet, broad in front and at the sides, but drawn down quite narrow at the back, where the tie is placed. Those tied at the side will also slope down at that point, the want of uniformity of width at the sides adding rather than to the graceful effect of the ensemble.

A New Shade of Yellow.

There is a new shade of yellow known as sulphur, but in reality better classed as saffron. As it is generally lined in white, the tint is anything but displeasing, and looks extremely well when accompanying a black or white skirt; with heliotrope also it is considered a pretty contrast, or, again, with light shades of brown, better known now as tobacco.

The Smart Trimming for a White Gown.

Nine-tenths of the orders at the dressmakers' at present are for white gowns in batiste, fine lincens, mull, silk muslin, tulle, mousseline de soie, chiffon, net, and Chantilly lace. These are trimmed with Swiss embroideries, applications of linen and silk, Cluny lace, ochre guipure, Irish guipure, in crustations of Chantilly, large guipure collars, Venice point and Alencon lace. But the real smart trimming for a drowsy white gown is linen or tulle color lace. This was frequently noted at the Horse Show. Mrs. George McFadden was gowned one day in an exquisite white costume, the lace which trimmed it being in this soft pale tan color. And Mrs. Van Rensselaer also wore a white gown trimmed with ecru lace. It is considered much more modern than to trim a white gown with white lace.

Hops Are Popular with the Best Milliners.

In millinery the sailor hats, made of white tulle, stitched in black, or of ecru, stitched in brown, are shown by the best houses. In flowers, hops are very popular with the best houses. These are in the natural shade of green; also in black, light blue, white and pink. Clover flowers in pastel shades or in the natural shades of the red or white clover, with foliage, are also one of the choice selections.

DAINTY CHERRY DISHES.

FRUIT in every possible form is now employed by the up-to-date housewife. She knows that fruit on the table is one of the best ways to keep the doctor at a distance. Cherries are now in sight, and the experimenting cook has found that they can be used in many ways dreamed of by our grandmothers. For one thing, there is the ## Cherry Soup.

The fruit should be very fresh and not too ripe, should be wiped perfectly dry, stemmed and stoned. Crack the stones carefully to preserve the kernels whole if possible. Put the fruit and kernels into a small porcelain-lined soup kettle, with red wine and water, half and half, add some very finely pared lemon rind, and stew the whole gently until the fruit is entirely melted. Boil in the soup a small stick of cinnamon, and sweeten to taste. Pass it through a colander. Put it back in the kettle and add a few croutons or crumbs fried in butter. When they are sufficiently steeped, serve.

Cherry Salad.

Cherry salad is made thus: Wash, stem and remove the stones from one cup of cherries; have the same amount of banana cut into dice. Mix one cup of sugar with one pint of strawberries, mash them, and let them stand until the sugar is dissolved. Strain out the seeds and pour the syrup over the cherries and bananas. Serve the mixture in cups made from the peel of lemons or oranges or in frappe glasses.

Cherry Sandwiches.

These are pronounced delicious, and the children take to them with astonishing appetite. Stone the cherries, sprinkle with sugar if necessary, and spread between thin slices of bread and butter. They are nice for the home luncheon.

Cherry Sauce for Roast Lamb.

Instead of the usual sauce for lamb, try one made from cherries. Cover a pint of sour cherries with a pint of water, add half a bay leaf and two crushed cloves. When the cherries are soft, rub through a sieve. Return to the fire, add a tablespoonful of butter, a little salt and paprika, and cook for five minutes, stirring all the time. At the last moment add about two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice. This must be served hot.

Some years ago sweet briar was introduced into Tasmania and became apparently too abundant. Goats were put upon the land with the idea that they would eat down the briars and ultimately eradicate them. But the briars came out best and eradicated the goats. The hairy billings of the fruit of the sweet briar killed the animals, as they did also a number of cattle.
